

ENG 102 Course Description: “Inquiry into Cross-Cultural Communication”
Buck Smith

Course Description:

Inquiry into Cross-cultural Communication

Our section of English 102 will focus on the topic of reading and writing across cultures in the global era. This skill will be essential for all of us over the course of our lives. By using written texts, visual media, and film segments, we will look at how communication has historically evolved due to globalization, how specific groups have had to change how they communicate, and consider how people will communicate across cultures in the future. You will be given the opportunity to explore a specific area within this topic that is particularly interesting to you. Assignments will include 3 formal essays, several informal journal-writing assignments, and a short 5-minute presentation.
