1. Linguistics Lecture Series Spring 2005

Thurs., 21 April, 4:30-5:30
1210 McClung Tower
Professor Phil Harrison
Voice IDs, Forensic Phonetics, and John Lennon

This talk draws on both strands of the speaker's experience, as a linguist and as a musician. It serves in part as an introduction to the science of forensic phonetics. But whereas the practical application of this science is more usually to be found in the Courtroom, the subject matter here is a set of previously unheard demo recordings by the late John Lennon which were sent to Dr Harrison for authentication by a London newspaper. It should be interesting to both language and music students, as well as to anyone with an interest in studying journalism or the law. It will be illustrated with some of the original sound recordings.

Sponsored by the Interdisciplinary Program in Linguistics, the Departments of Audiology and Speech Pathology, English, Modern Foreign Languages and Literatures, and the College of Law.

Open to the public: Thursday 21 April 2005 4:30-5:30 1210 McClung Tower.

Reception to follow.
