Note to first time users of On-Line@UT:

I WILL be using the Blackboard on-line system this semester for teaching AEE 521. I have learned over the years I’ve used this system that it works BEST if you use INTERNET EXPLORER rather than other browsers. I recommend you use the most recent version of Explorer to access my course sites.

AEE 521 students will find their materials available on the Blackboard site each Tuesday evening during the semester. Although AEE 521 is a distance delivered asynchronous course, I will post materials each Tuesday evening, just as if it were formally meeting at that time. You will have the entire week to access and complete the course materials and I will post the next materials the following Tuesday.

Please note that each AEE 521 student will be expected to develop a web page for the course by the end of the first week of class. At minimum, post a digital picture of yourself and a brief bio-data sketch on the site for your fellow students.

If you have questions about the use of Blackboard, complete the on-line tutorial about how to use the system. As soon as possible after sites are available, I encourage you to log onto the system and make sure you are properly enrolled in this class. I also encourage you to get started on your web page even before the semester starts so we can see who is registered on the first day of class.

Good Luck!
