

Greetings and Thanking

1. "Sawatdee" is the word used for greetings and goodbye.
2. Instead of shaking hands, Thais greet each other by "Wai". They do this by putting their hands together in a prayer-like gesture and raising them to a position somewhere between the chest and forehead and then bowing. The higher the hands are placed, the more respect is shown. The person might raise their fingertips as high as their nose. However, the tips of their fingers should never be above eyebrow level and say Sa-wat-dee.
3. There are different levels of Wai, depending on age and social status.
  1. For monk or Buddha, the fingertips are at the eyebrow level.
  2. For parents or elderly, younger people are expected to initiate Wai first. The fingertips are at the nose level.
  3. To accept Wai from younger people, the fingertips are at your chest level.
4. Thai people, especially younger people, also "wai" others as a greeting or to say 'thank you' and to show respect. There are several occasions that younger people will initiate Wai.
  1. When they are leaving/returning from home
  2. When they meet someone who is older than them at social functions, government offices, schools, etc.
  3. When they receive things from someone who is older.
5. Sometimes when Thai people run into their friends on the streets, their friends will ask them "pai nhai" (Where are you going?) as a greeting.
6. Foreigners are not expected to initiate this greeting but it is considered an insult for not returning the Wai back to the person who has been introduced.
7. In order to make the sentences sound polite, Thai people usually use ending particles "Krub" for males and "Kaa" for females at the end of the sentences.
